This is a title.

The pigeon spread his wings to catch the wind. Even the smallest breeze could make me rise above the the Northern peaks, he thought. The city's lights spread below him. His shadow a simple dot on a sidewalk.

For a moment he forgot the weary task at hand. A messenger pigeon he is, after all. The city's lights spread below him. His shadow a simple dot on a sidewalk. For a moment he forgot the weary task at hand. A messenger pigeon he is, after all.
